

Message to the Youth

James O'Dea

It grieves my heart deeply that you, the emerging generations, have inherited so many severe problems and enormous challenges facing humanity and all life on Earth at this time.

The truth of our human destiny has been covered over with false agendas and lies. But I know that our true evolutionary purpose is gathering a new unstoppable force and multivalent creative expression in you and through your awakening consciousness.

You are the bearers of a conscious activism that cultivates the wisdom needed to transform both systems and culture from the inside out. You know that it is neither fear, resentment nor desperation that fuels the change but courageous visionary collaboration to serve a love so potent it gives birth not to half measures but to universal solutions.
